Cellarmate from Auto Scales

A weighing device, which is specially engineered to fit neatly under the rim of the keg. That means the stock auditor has only to tilt the keg a few inches to slip the Cellarmate into place.

The large dial then gives an instant reading of the keg contents in gallons. A zeroing knob enables the user to set the scale pointer to allow for the empty weight of the keg up to 22 gallon containers.

When the keg moves off the floor slightly a reading is given on the handle of the device in gallons.

Cask Vents

The Race Cask Ventilator is a twin chamber non-return valve which allows the naturally produced Co2 to escape whilst retaining a slight blanket of Co2. This prolongs the life of the real ale by a number of days, allowing pubs who normally only sell real ale at the weekend to now sell during the week.
